Transgender Rights Bibliography:

Books, films, TV series, resources, and organizations

A transgender person is someone whose assigned sex at birth does not correspond with their own personal sense of their gender identity. The rights of people in the transgender community are jeopardized by hate and discrimination against those who exist outside of the gender binary. Film-makers, writers, scholars, and others are telling the stories of the LGBT+ community already, but more representation is needed. This list of resources is a small sample of what is available. We've put asterisks by strongly-recommended items. Please suggest items you'd like included on this list.
